SCENES IN YARKUND

A PARADE OF CHINESE TROOPS [illegible]

A correspondent of the London Times travelling with the [illegible] mission, sends the following interesting sketches to that Journal. Under date of Dec. 18th the correspondent writes:

"This morning we attended a parade of the Chinese troops of the Ameer under Kho Dalai, a very pleasant and gentlemanly fellow of about fifty. The number of Mahommedans or Celestials on parade amounted to some 1,200. The armament of this body of men is very peculiar and the manœuvres executed today were so exceptionally dramatic as to deserve a special description. From first to last the commands were delivered by flag signals, there being five flags in use, and variations being given by means of a big drum, which was beaten systematically to some particular tune during the execution of each manœuvre. One set of flags and the drum in question remained with the commander who [illegible] times retained a central position, and flag signals were repeated by flagmen on the right and left front.

These troops carry tafoos, or utterly sprawling, wall pieces—heavy, clumsy-looking weapons, about six feet long, stock and barrel. These are carried by two men, one of whom gives his shoulder as a rest, when the piece is fired; and with each are two others in attendance, one bearing a small sponge and the other a slow-match, with its supporting prong, and a small leather curtain. Crews of four are assembled in squads, having five tafoos, each of which is commanded by a subordinate officer armed with a cap-gun, and in front of each squad is a standard bearer. The union of two standards creates a group of ten tafoos, and with the special skirmishers attached, assembles from fifty to sixty men in one unit of manœuvre. The forces formed up in column of two standard groups, (double standards,) there being in all twenty-four such on the ground, and, after our formal reception, on the waving of a yellow flag and much drumming, groups wheeled into line, and as they were sections from the outer flanks of each twelve double standards advanced in front of the centre, wheeled outward, and, circling, reformed on their original grounds.

The march past concluded, a red flag brought skirmishers to the front. From the centre groups, monsters with short swords, in harlequin tights of bright yellow color, having stripes in imitation of beasts unknown, and bearing the famous dragon shields of China, came trooping forward to form groups of three, six and ten shields; behind which they laid themselves, occasionally peeping out to shout and grimace like an ogre in a pantomime form behind a cabbage-stalk. These truly formidable opponents to a civilized cavalry, then, extracting short match-locks from their lairs, opened fire deliberately, and, setting down, advanced wheel-fashion, after which they retired in a regular circus waltz [illegible] and retired. Kho Dalai next proceeded to form three sides of a gigantic square with a reserve in rear of the front face, and and then, by a movement of sections from the flanks and round the front, reformed for real business, a white flag directing the troops to load.

"Tafoos in line, fire a volley!" is communicated by a general display of bunting. Out run the whole of the skirmishers. Dragons emerge from the inner flanks of twelve double standards, bowing from the centre, and small boys armed with miniature pieces from nowhere in particular. The fire is tremendous, "Independent firing," is waved by bugler and flagmen, and the din becomes on y more surprising. However, warlike energy of this character must eventually expend itself, and when "Cease firing" is ordered, tafoos are sponged, under cover of a few expiring pops from the dragons and the explosion of imaginary mines immediately in front of the line. Silence restored, Brigadier Kho-Dalai forms two lines at intervals of 150 yards, opens fire with his first line, and bringing his second up in support, withdraws his first and engages his second; the display of an occasion [illegible] rocket indicating the existence of a reserve. Blazing off tafoos, gesticulations of dragons and bowmen steady second from the outer flanks retiring, turn inward, and at a double "heuling," pass across and change to the [illegible]. Dragons covering the movement. The [illegible] arrangement is perfect and the coloring inimitable. But we have not yet finished, only one attempt has now been called on to good things prepared for the spectators, and under the flag of a small tent pitched for our accommodation we settle down to a Chinese breakfast while observing the rest of the proceedings. By double attended from the outer flanks, march forward who'll had dressed 'Dragons to the front!' Such is the order of the day, and once more the monsters perform antics extraordinary before settling down meanwhile to three shield-covered groups to block the stage, and conceal the special performers now coming forward to exhibit. Quarter-staff champions, single-stick players, athletes, and dancers in ordinary, tumblers, small boys and cutlassmen, with order and disorder, engage and disengage, exchanging kicks and cuffs that would do credit to a Covent Garden Pantaloon. A central figure in red continuations, with wadded coat stowed [illegible] their broad expanse has, however, the closing scene to enact, which he does somewhat in this fashion. Armed with two swords he has a wild encounter with an imaginary opponent, is discovered and surrounded by the figures in blue, who drive him to seek death on the shields of the dragons. Hop, skip, and jump, and he stands at the edifice they have made, when crack goes a fire-rocket, and red breeches rolls a corpse to the bottom. The rapid way in which the body is picked up and removed, in a truly theatrical state of nil[illegible] description. These are indeed, relics of an ancient race of warriors, terrible if looks are to be believed, but a handful of lancers on the flank of 5,000 such might drive the mass before them in a panic-stricken rout. I have detailed the whole proceeding as an uncommon exhibition, but the interest of the combination of the dramatic with military manœuvres, to be found among all races having a Chinese origin, lies in tracing it back to Buddhism; the very sound of the drum and of the few instruments which formed the Dalai's military band recalled the strange discords to which the Lamas of Thibet performed the dances of wild masquerades in honor of Buddha. Whether in the Lamasery at Hemis or in the parade-ground at Kashgar, it is the same instinct inherited through many generations which makes the performance be at a religious or a warlike ceremony, among the most peculiarly ordered of theatrical representations."

TIBURCIO VASQUEZ, THE CALIFORNIA BANDIT, was at latest advices in a very tight place. He is now in the neighborhood of Los Angeles, which he has excited tremendously by a daring robbery quite characteristic of him and his followers. As sheep-shearers Tiburcio and four of his gang appeared at the ranch of one Repetto, a rich sheep owner, and asked employment. After a few moments' conversation they covered Repetto and his nephew with six-shooters, and a few [illegible] that he was the sheep they came to shear. The nephew handed over $80, all there was in the house, but Vasquez wanted more, or the sheep raiser's life. In fear of losing it Repetto wrote an order on his Los Angeles banker for the amount and sent his nephew for it, the youth being warned that if he whispered a word of the state of affairs at the ranch the climax of life and his own should answer it. The boy hurried to the city, and was so agitated that the banker suspected that something was wrong. He was detained until the sheriff was [illegible], and then he told the whole truth. He returned to [illegible] with the money he carried on [illegible] of the force hastily organized by the sheriff and reaching his uncle's house [illegible] the robber the ransom. Mounted on the best stock the bandits started off, eluding their pursuers, who coming up to some cannon where they think the fellows are caged find the tracks of horses' feet up the [illegible] trail precipitous trail, which they dare not [illegible] now. There is $1,000 on Tiburcio's head. He shouldn't risk so valuable a portion of his frame by dashing [illegible] the mountains in this way.

FRIDAY, MAY 1 1874.

THE FLOOD IN LOUISIANA

We in the North have very little conception of the wide spread disaster and ruin caused by the flood which now prevails throughout the Mississippi valley. A flood with its means an overflow of the rivers and streams upon the adjacent meadows and swamps, and occasionally a rise that may be injurious to property—rarely, however, endangering lives or causing damage to any great extent, and very seldom so sudden that reasonable precautions cannot afford sufficient protection. With the residents of the lowlands of the section named above, the case is different. The country is flat and a great deal of it lies below the high water mark of the rivers. The alluvial banks of the fountain rivers are all, in their natural state, more or less subject to inundation, and the occupants have depended upon a system of levees or banks for protection of their property from damage by overflow. The levels mabo alluvium is an inclined plane gradually descending from the river front back one mile in the dead level popularly known as the swamp and without exception, these river banks, whether of the Mississippi, Red River or the bayous subordinate rivers connected with the parent streams are more elevated than any other portions of the State. The garden spots of Louisiana (and they are garden spots indeed) include the lands lying on each side of the lower Mississippi, commencing in the east side, some forty miles below New Orleans, and extending about one hundred and fifty miles, until the high lands are reached at Baton Rouge. On the west side the better French land continues in an almost unbroken level through the entire length of the State until it reaches the Arkansas line. The land on both sides of the river, for a considerable portion varies in available level surface from one to two miles, and beyond as we have already stated, sinks into cypress cut or the swamp.

The helpful description necessary to a correct understanding of how the freshet on the Mississippi and other rivers throughout Louisiana has caused such an immense amount of damage. The "Father of Waters," bursting the feeble barriers which bound it at ordinary stages, has submerged over five millions of acres of the richest and most productive lands in the State—an area nearly equal to a quarter of the whole State of Maine—and corn, cane, cotton and tree plantations, together with all stock and its products, are involved in the common disaster. The brief telegraphic despatches which have announced the progress of the inundation have given readers but a faint idea of its magnitude. The loss falls most upon the great planters and the smaller farmers, and their property has vanished under the great lakes where but a few weeks ago were fine farms and plantations. The loss is not only immediate, but prospective for in addition to the destruction of the means of present subsistence, their stock and their crops, their land is rendered useless and unproductive for an indefinite time, and much of it can never be reclaimed.

In addition to this destruction of property, actual destitution stares thousands in the face and distress for lack of food and clothing is now common among the inhabitants of the inundated regions. Great as were the losses and sufferings caused by the conflagrations in Chicago and Boston, they are not to be compared in destructive effect to the disaster which has overtaken Louisiana.

The cause of all this loss and suffering is said to be the defects in the present system of levees. This "levee system," so called, was originally commenced by a few planters, those in the vicinity of New Orleans, throwing up slight embankments to protect their plantations from the spring tide. Very little of the work proved to do that, for the river rose in those earlier times had a wide waste to flood. Gradually, as population increased, the levee extended upward and on both sides of the river and without thought of the eventual consequences, the small and local outlets were one after another closed by levees this outrage to the descending flood was not resented, for great overflows were exceptional, but when cotton became of commercial importance the levees rapidly extended into a solid embankment including hundreds of miles, reaching on the east side from below New Orleans to the high lands at Baton Rouge, and on the west side from New Orleans to the Arkansas line, and thus a large portion of the State, which had been annually well fed, was suddenly reduced to starvation. Then it was that the mighty current chafed in its bed, and each crevice was found a weak place somewhere to discharge its confined waters. The result was that the waters annually of a larger and larger volume, than it would have cost to carry out a perfect system of drainage. To an extent it had this madness reached of shutting up outlets that, in the Catcordia district there was the grand levee, a huge embankment possibly forty feet high, under the protection of which were immense plantations, the surfaces twenty feet below the level of high water.

The unusually heavy and long continued rains of the present season raised the river to a great height, and the "escape valves"—the natural streams and bayous by which the overflow was formerly conducted into the lakes and swamps, then unredeemed—being closed, to which a strong current raged and forced through the levees in hundreds of places, making crevasses through which the water poured, sweeping off houses, crops, cattle and everything movable. Had the levees been properly attended to and their construction governed by a wise fore thought, this flood might possibly have been avoided.

Whatever has been the cause, the fact remains that untold suffering has resulted from the inundation, and the people of the devastated districts need sympathy and aid. Congress has promptly appropriated a goodly sum, and supplies of government rations and clothing have been forwarded. Throughout the North there has been a liberal response to the cry for aid, and money has been freely sent to be used by the relief committee organized at New Orleans. Several cities in our own State have donated considerable sums, and Bangor, whose citizens are never backward in contributing to a good cause, should not lag behind in this.

Washington despatches announce that the Senate Finance Committee at a special meeting yesterday had the House currency and free banking bill under consideration. The Committee, it is reported, have agreed that it ought to be amended by omitting the section which proposes to repeal the present law graduating the proportion of circulation to bonds deposited as security, according to the amount of the capital of the various National Banks. An interchange of views disclosed a certainty that the Committee will recommend that all the reserves for circulation should be abolished. The other important questions involved in this bill and in the general financial subject are yet to be acted on by the Committee. There are no trustworthy indications as to what their action will be.

The South Carolina tax-payers, after having had a long day in court, have been finally defeated. A sub-committee of the House Committee on the Judiciary have made their report to the full committee, and, after giving a careful history of the entire controversy, state that there is no way in which Congress can interfere. The whole committee adopted the report.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Escobedo has resigned the Governorship of San Luis Potosi.

As editor of Punch Mr Tom Taylor receives £1,200 a year.

Von Arnim has resigned the Ambassadorship of Prussia at Paris.

Alex H Stephens told a newspaper reporter that he was going Rome to die.

It is said there is no prospect of an adjournment of Congress before August.

The New York Legislature adjourned sine die on Thursday. All the rapid transit bills for New York failed.

It is said that the wife of Attorney General Williams is completely prostrated by the Sanborn scandal and its results.

Ex Senator Pomeroy's trial is again the subject of conversation in Kansas. It is said now that it will begin some time in June.

President Grant is reported as receiving commendatory letters from the South and West in large quantities for his recent veto.

Senator Boutwell has decided to appear before the Ways and Means Committee and testify to what he knows of the Sanborn contracts.

Sir Henry Thompson, the celebrated English surgeon, and now the champion of cremation according to this country on a pleasure trip next August.

Thomas Nast has been drawing too much on his physical resources, and has been obliged to give up lecturing, leaving a number of engagements unfulfilled.

A law court in Iowa has fined a farmer $20 because he made his son treat a grandstone, sixteen consecutive hours for going home with an old man from singing school.

Lieut. General P. H. Sheridan, President of the Cavalry Corps Association of the Armies of the United States, has issued a circular for a reunion of that organization at Harrisburg on May 14.

The leading candidates for the vacant Court of Claims Judgeship are now Representatives Maynard of Tennessee and Scofield of Pennsylvania. Both are Republicans at large from their respective States.

The people know that true reform can only be obtained through the Republican organization. Knowing this, they will stand by it, in the certainty that in the future as in the past, it will prove to be a party of progress and reform.—[Madison (Wis.) Journal.

Senator Ieet Washburn of Massachusetts has gone to Washington, and his farewell address was read in the Legislature Thursday. Lt. Governor Talbot has issued the usual official proclamation on assuming the duties of acting Governor.

When a man kicks in the dark there is no telling what dog he may hit. The veto of President Grant upset a very nicely arranged plan for the organization of a new party. And the expected baby, whose little clothes are all made, and whose name and godfather were all in readiness, won't be born at all.—[N Y. Graphic.

The Albany Journal has reason to believe that the veto measure was President Grant's own composition, and that part of it was written several weeks ago, with the design of sending it as a special message to Congress urging that body to prompt, wise and just action on the currency question, with a view to immediate resumption.

The voice of the Western press, according to a classification by The Chicago Tribune, is largely against inflation, and in favor of the President's veto. It publishes a list of 110 newspapers, comprising all of the prominent journals of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, and Missouri and the divis on is sixty-eight in favor of the veto, forty two against it, and ten silent on the fence.

The Augusta Journal states that it has been taken for granted that under the law levying a State tax upon savings banks, the deposits in these banks were to be taxed by the State this year. But several legal gentlemen and assessors of cities and towns say that the act itself does not so provide. Heretofore deposits have been subject to a municipal tax the same as other property, but section 3 of the act in question transfers this to the State and exempts it from municipal taxation. The section which fixes the time for the act to go into operation, May 15th, declares that the first return of deposits, herein required, shall be made on the last Saturday preceding the first Monday of November following. Under this construction it is claimed that no taxation will be made by the State until November, when the one-half per cent State tax added by the Legislature will be assessed, so that municipalities will this year tax deposits on savings banks the same as usual.

The rival Governors in Arkansas being prevented from tearing out each other's eyes by a few regular troops, have transferred their quarrel to New York and Washington. In the former city they present their arguments in the columns of a daily paper, and at the National Capital they are each represented by attorneys. A Washington special states that it is probable the President will refer the whole question to the Attorney General, who will hear the attorneys and examine the evidence to be submitted. He will then give his opinion to the President, who will decide the question, and furnish military aid to the one whom he decides is entitled to it, if the contingency should arise.

As cremation, in the following paragraph from the Chicago Times, is shown to be a native American institution, it surely ought not to be objected to any more than scalping and similar aboriginal diversions: When that paragon of animals, the Digger Indian, burns his dead, it being an immemorial custom in the tribe, what right has a poor squirming Caucasian to object to cremation? The noble Indian of the tribe mentioned scorns to be a grave-Digger. Why should not the worthy white man emulate so worthy an example?

THE PARTY OF THE PEOPLE. Says the Indianapolis Journal.

The Republican party is as much the party of the people to day as it ever was. It embraces and represents the same elements of progress and reform, and evinces the same readiness to respond to the political necessities of the times. As a party it has made no great mistakes, and the persistent attempt of the opposition to hold it responsible for the errors or misdeeds of some of its individual members, ought not to deceive any honest man. No other party has ever shown the same readiness to expose and punish the dishonest men in its ranks; and none has called its leaders to such swift and severe account for political short comings. Whatever may be the faults of the Republican party, it is far more competent to manage the affairs of this country than any combination which can be formed out of the heterogeneous materials opposed to it. It can give the people all needed reforms, and if it fails to do so, these reforms cannot be reached through the agency of any political organization now in existence or likely to be formed.

THE LABOR TROUBLES AT ST. JOHN The action of the employes of several lumber mills in St. John, N. B., in preventing men from working in mills who do not belong to their organization and otherwise demanding changes in customs, usages, etc., has undoubtedly induced the owners' business of that important point for the season. The mill-owners unanimously voted, at a meeting on Monday, not to employ a man who refused on the night by telegraphic to place themselves to manage their business, and ship to notice at once to defend their men to submit to work in the mills, against the unreasonable demands, and to furnish extraordinary facilities to those who have contracts to fill. For these purposes $50,000 was raised.

To enable the Pulmonic Syrup to do this, Schenck's Mandrake Pills and Schenck's Sea-weed Tonic must be freely used to stimulate the liver, remove all obstructions, and cause the food to act on the liver, converting it into bile, which the gall bladder, the bile starts freely, and the liver is cleansed.

THE TEMPERANCE MEETING. The temperance meeting in City Hall last evening was not so largely attended as usual, owing to the bad weather. The exercises were very interesting, and were opened with reading of the Scriptures and prayer by Rev. Ammi Prince. WALLET THIEF CAUGHT. Yesterday noon Marshal Bolton and Officer P. F. R. Clark arrested Geo. Lancaster, of Hudson, for the theft of a wallet containing something over $100 from the Messrs. Eaton, for whom he was at work in a township near Lincoln. Lancaster had been at work for the Eaton Brothers during the Spring, and a few days ago a wallet belonging to the firm was missed. Shortly after he wished to be paid off, and his employers did as he requested, when he went to Lincoln and took the train for this city. It being suspected that he knew something of the missing money, a despatch was sent to Major Bolton to arrest him, and taking the officer with him, he went to the National House. Officer Clark noticed that as they stepped in, a man walked out and he followed him up and arrested him, and found that he was the man he wanted. As the two were proceeding toward the lockup, Lancaster, being for a moment unobserved, threw the wallet in the window of the Eastern Express Co.'s stable, and on arriving at the station confessed that he had found a wallet in the woods and threw it away after he was arrested. Marshal Bolton then took him and walked back to the stable, where he found the wallet in charge of the ostler, who had received it from some boys playing about the premises. The prisoner was afterwards taken before the Police Court, and the Judge bound him over to the August term of the S. J. Court.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

APRIL CIVIL TERM.

CHIEF JUSTICE APPLETON Presiding.

EZRA C. BRETT, Esq., Clerk.

Thursday, April 30th. Edmund H. Fogg vs R. W. Wilson; action upon a note for $100.50 given to one J. R. Wilson and by him endorsed to plff.

The defendant introduced testimony tending to show that a portion of the consideration for which the note was given was an unlawful agreement that a criminal proceeding which had been instituted against J. R. Wilson, for whose benefit the note was given, should be dropped. Verdict for defendant.

Wilson & Woodard. L. Barker.

Davis Lambert vs Robert Bryant. Trover for a cow.

Defense—That defendant bought the cow under an impounder's sale.

Reply—That the proceedings in impounding and selling the cow were defective and not according to statute.

After the evidence was out the case was made law on report.

A. Sanborn. Wilson & Woodard.

Alonzo E. Miller vs. William Smith, action on the case for causing the arrest of plff, upon a writ, as about to leave the State. The deft. was a wholesale dealer in intoxicating liquors and plff was a retailer of same, and the action was brought for recovery of a bill of liquors sold to Miller.

The Court ruled that a suit for intoxicating liquors sold in violation of law is not sufficient to authorize the arrest and imprisonment of the plff. The case went to the jury on the question of damages for the arrest, and committing plff to jail for several hours before he could get bail. The jury had not agreed when the Court adjourned.

Addition. Wilson & Woodard.

A. Sanborn.

ON TRIAL.

Alfred Bolton vs. Albion Page; action on the case upon a warranty of a horse, which plff alleges was unsound.

Petition of Bridget Ford for damages from cutting down Pine street—referred to the Mayor and Alderman Bryant.

The following petition was presented by Mayor Blake for the action of the Board.—

BANGOR, April 17, 1874.

To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Bangor:

The undersigned citizens and legal voters of the City of Bangor would respectfully represent that in their opinion the interest and welfare of the City requires that the office and business of City Liquor Agency should be abolished, and we would further represent that the indications are that the voters of the City of Bangor would so decide, and, with a view of testing that question, we ask that a meeting be called at an early day in the several Wards of our City to decide that question.

After some discussion the petitioners were granted leave to withdraw, the reasons assigned being that the petition showed no question to be submitted to the people; if the Board were to specify some question in a warrant for Ward meetings, it might not be satisfactory to the petitioners, and since the question of the establishment of an Agency was left with the Board by Statute and City Ordinance, it is a matter of doubt as to their having a right to command that the citizens come out and vote upon the question of abolishing the Agency.

It was mentioned during the discussion that the petitioners could not be much interested in their petition, as none of them were present.
